

SkaraBrae

FROM DUBAI TO YOU

When people learned to farm and lived in permanent settlements, they began to make furniture. Some of the earliest known furniture in Europe comes from stone age, from a village at Skara Brae in the Orkney islands in Scotland about 2000 BC.

Our knowledge of ancient furniture is mainly derived from scenes depicted in early art forms, such as pottery decorations and frescos. Perhaps the earliest furniture in existence is that found at Catal Huyuk in Turkey that dates from around 3000 BC.

By the influence of this Godsent heritage, Skara Brae recapitulate it's spelndid journey of untainted craftsmanship.

Tafa

LOUNGE CHAIR

H: 75cm | W: 64cm | D: 70.4cm

Tafa, This concept is originated from Arabic language which means the 'Float'. The chair is designed to install a sense of fascination and ambiguity as users take a closer look at what seems to be a continuous strand of bent solid oak.

The chair's main focal point is its "floating" seat pan. In order to achieve such a cantilever, the frame's joints have been carefully designed, manufactured and tested to handle repeated use. Ergonomics and comfort are some of the main driving forces directing the form. The decision to design a lounge chair was intentional in order to carry its laid back concept through to its use
